Umpire-Johnstone. WESTERN JOCKEYS SHOW GOOD RACING JUDGMENT

Hildebrand and Walsh Are the "Finds" of Season on the Pacific Coast.

That winter racing provided a school for jockeys was demonstrated years ago, but the past winter has probably developed more good riders than previous seasons. There are nearly a dozen apprentices that have shown ability. Not all of them will turn out high class riders, but some will rank as first-class boys. There are two-E. Walsh and E. Hildebrand-who may be classed among the finished artists. If they Runs-Kihm (2), Clymer, Stone, Pennell classed among the finished artists. If they (2), O'Brien, Clark. Sacrifice hit-Bridwell. do not make "hits" in the jockey world then their work at Los Angeles, San Francisco and New Orleans has only been a flash of merit. Hildebrand is under contract to one of Francisco early in the season, after Redwas in constant demand. When he left San Francisco for Los Angeles he became Redfern's rival. Up to that time Redfern had been the star at the Southern track. A battle for supremacy between them followed, but Redfern, being the heavier, was a trifle stronger in a tight finish on equal horses. In point of judgment of pace and accepting proffered opportunities during a race Hildebrand probably showed a trifle advantage. He can ride at about ninety pounds, and his alertness at the post sometimes gets him into trouble with the starter, but he can be depended upon to get off with his accident. No sooner is the field on the way than Hildebrand takes a glance at the RHE situation and acts according to circumprefers to let others make the running 1:30. debrand. He uses practically the same methods and will frequently take up his mount if he finds the pace too hot for him, especially if there are two horses making the pace. He has been seen to take back three or four lengths in a six furlong race, leaving the pacemakers to "go it" alone, By this means he has been able to make a strong bid in the stretch and beat out horses that would surely have beaten him also use the whip to advantage when in a The difference in the disposition of the

If fined or suspended by the starter he is liable to ride carelessly, especially if his mount is not a mild, con-Hildebrand is more of a fighter when anything crosses him. A fine by the starter seems to make him more determined, and should a jockey not play fair with him he is likely to get the worse of the bargain in the end. He is inclined to be a triffe rough in his work, if a little rough work will save a race, but this he does not employ except in extreme cases.

Both boys may get the best mounts in the East this season, and these remarks may be interesting to those who have not had the opportunity to see them at their best. Walsh will probably ride at Elm Ridge Park during the coming meeting. His employer, Tommy Griffin, has Bill Curtis entered in the Derby, and Trainer Brewster has wired him to send Walsh here at once. OFFERS TO SELL RARUS. "I had several offers to sell Rarus, but I would never put a price on him until one day a man came to me and asked me to put a price on the famous racer. I told the stranger that the only man to whom I would quote a price was Robert Bonner, Evansville because I knew he would take care of the horse. A few days later the man came | Marion 4 back and told me that he represented Mr. Bonner, and I then priced Rarus at $40,000 Mr. Bonner called upon me and we made a bargain. I sold him the horse as he stood in the stable.

"You know, many fine horses have been sold at half their value. One of the most striking instances was when Mr. Mesner, former owner of Dan Patch, sold the champion pacer for $20,000 simply because he didn't let the fact become known that he was willing to sell the great stallion. M. H. Savage purchased the animal for that amount when others would have paid twice the amount and grabbed at the chance. "I met a man some time ago who wanted to sell a valuable team, but he didn't care to advertise the fact, I told him I would give him $6,000 for the two horses. I made the matter known that I would sell them. and sent special delivery letters to prominent men all over the country to the effect that I would sell the team at public auction on a certain date. One of these letters he tossed it aside, but spoke of it to a friend that evening. The friend advised him to purchase the team, and Mr. Knox sent an agent to the sale. The man came to me and showed his ignorance on horse sales by telling me that he had $12,500 in cash and instructions to buy the horses, and wished to know that in case he had to bid more than that amount would I take the $12,500 as a payment until he could telegraph for more money. I told him not to tell any one else what he had told me. Well, he purchased the team for Mr. Knox for $9,500, and I made $3,500 on the sale."
